

ABSTRACT

A device is provided for removable attachment to a golf tee to reduce the amount of friction between a golf ball and golf tee. The device includes a base and several groups of bristles. A golf tee is inserted into the base member and drive into the ground with the spike end of the golf tee. A golf ball is then supported upon the groups of bristles and hit with a golf club.